Abstract	This analysis identifies a natural heritage system design for a focus area of the Algonquin to Adirondacks (A2A) region. The A2A region extends from the southern edge of Adirondack Park in New York State to the northern edge of Algonquin Provincial Park in Ontario and encompasses the general area between the two parks. This area has been identified as an important for species movement between these two large core natural areas. Analysis was completed on the natural heritage features of the fragmented areas of this region that has considerable development pressures in Ontario and New York State.
Purpose	The project goal was to provide the A2A Collaborative some natural heritage system mapping and information that will support land use planning, stewardship activities, land securement programs and conservation efforts by planning authorities, conservation groups, community organizations and residents in the A2A region.
